ADAPTING TO THE NEW NORMAL

In a world where people have less and less time, giving them back time when they visit your store can not only improve customer experience, but can also help build brand loyalty and trust.

As customers come back to stores and we adapt to the “new normal”, retailers are looking for ways to attract customers, develop relationships and provide customers a good experience when they visit their store.

Traditionally, cash payment has been at the store counter. But retailers are now looking for ways to improve how they continue to serve their customers in the most efficient, safe, and secure way.

A DIFFERENT APPROACH TO HANDLING CASH

Traditionally, cash payments at the point of sale involve cashiers taking cash and giving change to customers by hand. As well as close proximity and physical contact between staff and customers, the opportunity for mistakes to be made are high.

Whether in a supermarket, convenience store, food outlet or virtually any other retailer; adopting automated cash handling solutions at the point-of-sale can offer businesses a quick and easy way for their customers to pay for services and purchases in-store, while helping reduce lines at the counter.

By introducing technology that automates payments, significant efficiency gains can be realized. Virtually all cash transactions can be handled automatically, allowing staff to concentrate on customer service and delivering a better experience in the store.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF BOTH YOUR STAFF AND CUSTOMERS

For your customers, the payment for goods or services is often the last experience they have with your brand. Cash automation technology can help them pay and leave the store quickly, without having to wait in line. Concerns customers may have about coming into close contact with staff are eliminated and they can be confident paying in cash.

For your staff, they can be relieved from non-productive and stressful activities. Cash payment automation can help improve efficiency in order to manage lines. There is no need for staff to handle cash and therefore errors and discrepancies can be eliminated.
